

Dear Readers,

This time we would like to dedicate the Newsletter to a type of language which should be the language of the moment - not only because Christmas is one of its' strongest symbols but also because it is the best remedy against a disease called "crisis" and its' symptoms of frustration, depression, shortage of personal energy and will-power as well as creativity and productivity:

It is the LANGUAGE OF HOPE.

- HOPE is the one feeling said to be the "last to die".
- HOPE is the one thought that makes people believe in a better tomorrow.
- HOPE is the one vision that makes people striving for new solutions.
- HOPE is the one engine which fires will-power and endurance.
- HOPE is the one word having been spoken in million ways by leaders throughout history who succeeded in LEADING THEIR PEOPLE OUT OF CRISIS.

Instead of speaking the LANGUAGE OF CRISIS with its' life-threatening notions let's start to speak the LANGUAGE OF HOPE, fostering clear concepts of a better tomorrow. Hope, based on the (scientifically proved) fact that life always finds a solution to go on. And nowhere else life's creativity of finding solutions is anchored more deeply than in mankind.

The language of hope is as easily learnable as the language of crisis. The difference shows in the result: the first leads people out of crisis and the second leads them even deeper into it.

It is your choice which course you register in. If you want to register for HOPE, please take note of the next course, starting in February 2009. If you are interested to enroll, please send us an email for more information. If you are interested in speakers who are able to instill hope in the hearts & minds of their audiences, please see the Leadership & Motivation-Section on www.international-business-speakers.com.

WISHING YOU A VERY MERRY SEASON OF HOPE and looking forward to meeting you again next year, the YEAR OF CHANGE!

Yours truly,

Martina Gleissenebner
